It is also a multicultural society with two official languages, English and French, and is proud of its ethnic diversity.

Canadians are widely regarded as friendly, polite, and well-educated, and enjoy a very high standard of living – Canada has been ranked in the top 10 countries in the UN Quality of Life Index since 2004. Canada's population is approximately 34.5 million, with one of the lowest population densities in the world at 3.7 persons per square kilometre.

British Columbians identify closely with nature. The province is home to ten majestic mountain ranges, thousand year old trees, vast lush forests, and glacier-fed streams that pour through steep valleys on their way to join swollen rivers that flow into the Pacific Ocean.

This abundant, nurturing landscape has sustained ancient societies for 10,000 years. Today, some of those settlements have grown into beautiful cities that cling to the edge of wilderness, where their inhabitants can enjoy a refined meal, a round of golf, and an evening of skiing all in the same day. All that activity breathes energy into the culture of hospitality.
